In the Windows 7 32-bit WinCC Flexible 2008 Runtime, look in the Tools menu and there should be a new folder option called Project Save as Version. Make a new project, save it as a complete backup of the old one, then do as I indicated above in the answer. Or, you can save the new version of the project. Follow the examples and open the project, ensure it's saved as a backup of the original project. Then press WinCC Save As Project. Change the Project Save as in the Project Save as dialog. Note that Windows 7 will display a warning if you change the project to a backup of an old project. Just click OK. Now you have a Project version that can easily be deleted if you are not satisfied with the upgrade and restore to the backup. Then import the project back from the backup, or restart with the new project version. In your VMware Win7 WinCC Flexible, continue as follows. Double-click My.WinCC.exe on your Win 7 Desktop. The WinCC Runtime (or WinCC client) interface appears, and the projects you have. Select your project, then press WinCC Save as Project. You will have a new Project Save as As dialog. On the Save as As dialog, choose Project save as. Save as type Choose a type by choosing one of these. Choose Choose another type Choose another type disk file. Browse to the location you want to save the disk file, then save it. You can chose the drive letter, if any, to be the same as the old drive letter. Click Finish. A new project appears, along with a menu allowing you to open the project. To open a project, click Open Project. A new menu appears, allowing you to reload the project from the disk file you just created, or to rename the project. Once in Win7 WinCC Flexible, I do the following to upgrade WinCC Advanced Runtime to WinCC Standard Runtime Close any instances of WinCC Flexible in any Windows VM's. In the original VM, close the VM and right click on My.WinCC.exe on the Windows 7 desktop. In my Win 7 VM, there was a Microsoft Office VM, so I could not close that. But on a standard Win 7 OS, I did close the VM. In the Windows 7 WinCC Flexible, open the Projects Dialog box.
